How can you use social media to positively influence your life?

By Capt. Michelle Sierra-Kwanhdam
18th Medical Operations Squadron

SAMURAI GATE -

Some of us spend hours on Instagram, Facebook and Twitter. We scroll through countless pictures, watch endless videos and some involve themselves in question-able commentary. At times, we leave these realms feeling inadequate or hopeless. So, how can we use this technological space to meaningfully educate, motivate and inspire us into action?

I will spend the next few paragraphs exploring that idea with you. Let us think about “trending,” cueing, and behavioral activation, and how these three areas can help you enjoy and grow from using technology.

Trending and spheres of influence:
What do you like on Facebook?

For better or worse social media learns what we like and spoon feeds us similar content. So, what you follow, what you like and what you click on is incredibly important. Therefore, be thoughtful and start to search for more meaningful content. Here are some recommended categories or keywords: motivational speakers, gratitude, parenting, etc. Find trusted sources of information like National Public Radio, the Gottman Institute, Times magazine and National Geographic, and follow their pages. Start to intentionally like content that resonates with you.

Cueing:
Have you been meaning to use your language app to study, but you keep forgetting? Increase your utilization of desired apps by organizing your icons on your smart phone or tablet home screen. If you open your phone right now and you have over 15 apps then you would probably benefit from reorganizing! My top recommendations are to have your 4 heavily used icons on the bottom of your screen and one or two of the icons you’ve been wanting to increase use of on your home screen. Move all other icons to separate pages. We look at our phone multiple times a day, so the picture we have on our home screen and what we have on our locked screen can greatly help us accomplish our goals or just be another distraction. Another similar tool to cueing is pairing. So, for example to increase my use of my language study app I’m going to set a goal: Before I check Facebook, I’m going to spend five minutes in my language app. Since I frequently use Facebook, it’ll help me re-member, “oh wait” I told myself I would practice my languages prior to looking on social media. Focused attention and repetition are the keys to creating a new habit.

Behavioral Activation:
Now that you’re seeing more positive, healthy, and meaningful content, what do you do next?

Do not get lulled into inaction. Create a donation for your next birthday, set a date with friends to watch a documentary or educational video, join a local club or event like “Nerd Nite” at a favorite restaurant or cafe. You could even use the Kadena Connect mobile app to find out if there is a group for you on Facebook join. Visit Kadena’s 18th Force Support Squadron Library to see all the other free mobile apps and websites we have access to like Mango Languages mobile app, RBD Digital and many more! If we don’t use it then we can lose these amazing free privileges. Each download and each time you use it is like a bonus!

5/16/2019 - TYNDALL AIR FORCE BASE, FL — The 325th Fighter Wing is approaching the conclusion of Combat Archer 19-8 that was conducted in conjunction with the on-going Checkered Flag 19-2 exercise at Tyndall Air Force Base, Florida, May 6-17.

The Combat Archer exercise, also known as the Weapons Systems Evaluation Program, is the Department of Defense’s largest air-to-air live-fire evaluation exercise. Squadron leaders monitor the life span of a missile to assess execution performance by maintenance crew members, aircraft armament systems members and aircrew members.

“Combat Archer is readiness,” said U.S. Air Force Lt. Col. Vaimana Conner, 83rd Fighter Weapons Squadron commander. “In addition to providing confidence to senior leaders, it also ensures both the operations and maintenance crews are ready to employ in combat in an air-to-air environment.”

Exercise participants from across the Air Force, to include members from the 494th Fighter Squadron, the 67th Fighter Squadron and the 94th Fighter Squadron, employed variations of live air-intercept missiles against unmanned aerial targets that were remotely operated by the 82nd Aerial Target Squadron. The aircrew battled against the simulated threats over the Gulf of Mexico.

While Combat Archer 19-8 is an extensive exercise on its own, Tyndall AFB leaders combined the operation with Checkered Flag 19-2 because of their complimentary objectives that focus on air-to-air conflict.

“There is a lot of synergy with the two exercises, but they are two separate exercises with their own objectives,” Conner explained. “In addition to evaluating the systems during Combat Archer, this was also an opportunity for the squadrons to practice and train for something they can’t do anywhere else.”

According to Conner, more than 40 aircraft and 800 personnel participated in the exercises, making it the largest training operation since Hurricane Michael.

“This exercise is all about readiness,” Conner said. “(The Airmen) were definitely well-prepared, especially in this austere environment currently at Tyndall and the challenges that come with operating in a state of recovery. They were able to outstandingly execute their mission.”

RADON GAS: The 18 AMDS Biocenvironmental Engineering Flight can help answer any questions you may have about radon gas in your home. Additionally, the Kadena Housing Office can supply you with your home’s most recent radon test results.

MOLD can be a huge problem here in Okinawa. Below are some recommended practices to help mitigate mold in your home:

- Keep home temperature between 76 - 80 °F (24.4 - 26.6 °C),
- Clean your filters every 30 days, to ensure they do not become clogged,
- Regularly clean and dry walls and floors, especially around the sink, bathtub, shower, toilet, windows, and patio doors using a common disinfecting cleaner.

For additional mold mitigation tips please visit the Kadena Housing Office Website and look under the Mold Tips Tab:

5/17/2019 - TORII STATION, OKINA-WA — U.S. Marines and Sailors with Marine Corps Base Smedley D. Butler buddy dragged, sprinted and crawled through the sands of Torii Beach as part of their annual 101 Critical Days of Summer training May 17 on United States Army Garrison Torii Station, Okinawa.

The training was designed to build camaraderie between the different units within Marine Corps Installations Pacific, Headquarters and Support Battalion, while educating service members of the dangers on Okinawa during the hot summer months.

“We are here to use some of the terrain and environment we are in to make sure the Marines understand the seriousness of safety during the summer,” said Col. Vincent J. Ciuccoli, commanding officer with Headquarters and Support Battalion, Marine Corps Installations Pacific-Marine Corps Base Camp Butler. “In this case we are emphasizing water safety.”

During the training approximately 300 service members moved through eight stations taught by Marines within the battalion, each with their own Okinawa specific safety topic, ranging from typhoon readiness to knowing when it’s safe to enter the water.

“It’s a good opportunity to give the knowledge you have from being on island for a year to other Marines,” said Pfc. Edwin Gomez Jr., a personnel clerk with Headquarters and Support Battalion, Marine Corps Installations Pacific-Marine Corps Base Camp Butler, Japan.

Annual Marine Corps training is usually held in a theater with Marines watching a PowerPoint for a few hours. This training was intentionally conducted with a more unconventional approach as a creative way to engage and educate the Marines. This training method was very similar to the battalions’ Back in the Saddle training earlier this year.

“Remember, the rescuing that has to occur,” said Ciuccoli. “Whether it’s during a typhoon or on a normal day, someone else has to put themselves at risk to save you when you put yourself at risk.”

Real life scenarios train firefighters to be ready in any situation

By Lance Cpl. Nicole Rogge
Marine Corps Installations Pacific
5/20/2019 - TORII STATION, OKINAWA — Firefighters located across the largest island in the Ryukyu participated in fundamental training May 20 on United States Army Garrison Torii Station.

The training was designed to familiarize the firefighters with their gear as well as enhance their abilities to perform during stressful situations.

“We teach everything from fundamental drags to lifts and techniques,” said Lee Vernon, CEO of Code 3 Medical Services. “We demonstrate search and rescue on how to navigate large areas, confined spaces, and how to get around in the dark and smoke.”

During the training, firefighters were given a scenario before blindly walking into a room full of obstacles they had to maneuver under, over and through. At the end of the training, the culminating event brought the firefighters into a smoke filled room where they had to follow a hose to find a victim and bring them out to safety.

“Doing the firefighter down rescue, helps us to train safely, and in a real life situation,” said Yuki Hirata, a firefighter with Marine Corps Installations Pacific, based on Camp Schwab. “You never know what can happen, your partner can fall down or get hurt.”

Not only do firefighters receive calls from on base residence, they also respond to incidents reported off base. Knowing the different building structures and materials used is also important when fighting a fire.

“Here in Okinawa, everything is made out of concrete,” said Vernon. “So your contents can produce a lot of smoke and there is nowhere for the fire to go, so the heat and smoke make a big oven. We need to give them the knowledge and the experience to go in and retrieve people quickly from that environment.”

For many of the firefighters this was the first time receiving this kind of hands on training, so working with the gear and each other was a way to boost their confidence and knowledge.

“Continue to train and push the envelope,” said Vernon. “Don’t get stagnant because this constantly changes. From medicine to firefighting things change, our environment changes and you’ve got to stay one step ahead.”

MCIPAC ensures to provide support to mitigate the effects of, respond to, and recover from emergencies and disasters in an all-hazards and environments.

How to File a Complaint with IG

If you believe you are unable to resolve your complaint through supervisory channels, you may seek IG assistance to determine if the complaint should be filed with the IG. You can file a complaint if you reasonably believe inappropriate conduct has occurred or a violation of law, policy, procedures, or regulation has been committed. Complete the personnel data information on an AF Form 102 and briefly outline the facts and relevant information related to the issue or complaint. List the allegations of wrongdoing briefly, in general terms and provide supporting narrative detail and documents later, when interviewed by an IG person. Allegations should be submitted as bullet points and should answer who committed the violation; what violation was committed; what law, regulation, procedures, or policy was violated; when did the violation occur. Help is available: Call your Kadena IG office at 634-7622 for Maj Sarabia, 634-2768 for SMSgt Aguirre, or leave a message on the IG hotline at 634-0404.
